

This whole concept is quite alarming. With so much additional housing in the Borough the infrastructure will not cope.

With successive governments (and this one is no better), there have been cuts to policing, health care (with the current round of STP's there will be even more), adult social care etc these will be set even thinner. especially if we believe what we are being told that Melton Hospital is set to close completely. it is obvious that all of the different bodies do not consult with each other when drawing up these plans.

As for Bottesford itself that level of housing will cause chaos on the roads in Bottesford, it is already dangerous going up high street with traffic parked on both sides of the road, junctions are blind particularly on the junction of Albert Street, High Street and Barkstone Lane where there is potential for a serious accident. Queen Street parking is also double parking making it difficult to negotiate and when the coop delivery lorry is there it is a nightmare. it is a wonder there has been no serious accident.

We both seriously object to so much development in this rural village. if we wanted to live in town we would live in Melton Mowbray.
