I am unclear why only 65% of housing needs are met within Melton where there might be greater potential for development. Melton provides significant potential for employment, has good transport links and service facilities reducing the need for car journeys and therefore environmentally beneficial. Housing within service centres and rural communities provide less opportunities for employment and therefore are more dependant on good transport links or would require the use of a car.

Distribution in rural areas should not be based solely on population. Presence of historic features, sustainability of services and road networks and availability of sites for potential development should also be considered when allocating housing requirements
